On the cover (at bottom)

Introduced in 2021 to mark St. Boniface Hospital's 150th anniversary, the Foundation River graphic has three meanings:

1. It honours the spirit of compassion that St. Boniface is known for, which flows through the hospital from department to department.
2. It is a visual expression of the connection between the caregiver and patient or patient's family.
3. It represents the Red River, the landmark river flowing past the Hospital.

Real Stories from Real Health-Care Workers

Starting in December 2020 on social media, Dr. Gigi Osler (at right) posted a series of video clips of St. Boniface Hospital health-care workers on the front lines of the pandemic. Story on page 7.

Stanford University Releases List

A comprehensive list released by Stanford University in 2020 identified the top 2 per cent of the world's nearly 7 million working scientists, and St. Boniface Hospital Research boasts ten of these top scientists in the world.

"To have one or two researchers on a list of the world's top 2 per cent of scientists is a great accomplishment for any institution. Having ten such individuals is a testament to the outstanding research and teaching environment we have built here at St. Boniface, and reflects a tremendous return on investment in local research by the people of Manitoba," said

Dr. Mohammed H. Moghadasian — Nutrition & Dietetics, St. Boniface Hospital Research.

Dr. Michael Czubyrt, Interim Executive Director of Research. "We are truly proud of this global recognition of the impact of our colleagues'
hard work."

Taking Charge of our Future

What can we say about the past year that has not already been said?

Phrases like “herd immunity” and “flattening the curve” have become part of our daily lives. We have been reminded over and over to follow the fundamentals, stay at home, and even more often to un-mute ourselves in virtual gatherings. It has been tiring.

Through it all, St. Boniface Hospital has continued to provide refuge and compassionate care to thousands of Manitobans who face critical and health, dementia and Alzheimer’s, functional foods and nutraceuticals.

On page 10 you can read how St. Boniface Hospital’s McEwen Building, where thousands of patients each year find care for mental illness, has been transformed thanks to a $2.7 million investment from donors and government. The anxiety and isolating effects of the pandemic have only underlined the importance of supports and services in this area. Improvements included updates to inpatient bedrooms, redesigned family complex conditions, and to those who have COVID-19. Meanwhile, we have been overwhelmed by your outpouring of support for our nurses, doctors, and other front line health-care workers at St. Boniface – through donations to our COVID-19 Response Fund, and donations of food and comfort items.

That’s not to mention your unwavering support of all priority areas within the Hospital, such as Cardiac Sciences Manitoba, the Renal Program, our Neonatal Intensive Care Unit, Palliative Care Unit, and medical research in cardiovascular and recreation areas, and more. Society has come a long way in recognizing that mental health is health, period, and no less an aspect of personal well-being than a healthy heart.

Today, caregivers at the Hospital continue to go above and beyond, while working through their fear and anxiety, to keep Manitobans safe. We urge you not to let their efforts be in vain. Please, stay home if you can, get vaccinated, and continue to practice the fundamentals. It is tiring, but worth it when lives can be saved.

Real Stories from Real Health-Care Workers

St. Boniface Hospital surgeon documented the second wave

"Let's go."

Dr. Gigi Osler started each of her social media stories with the same invitation. Osler, of the Department of Surgery at St. Boniface Hospital and Assistant Professor in the Department of Otolaryngology-Head and Neck Surgery at the University of Manitoba, is very active on social media and an emerging influencer on platforms like TikTok, Instagram, and Twitter.

Beginning in early December 2020 and lasting well into the new year, Osler released dozens of stories to document the second wave of COVID-19 as it unfolded at the Hospital. Often raw and emotional, the clips of nurses, therapists, and others – all wearing scrubs, face shields and masks – speaking frankly from the front lines showed the toll the pandemic took on our health-care workers as they struggled to keep up. Osler and her colleagues were concerned that a significant increase in cases, hospitalizations and ICU admissions was around the corner. "One day I was speaking with Dawn Affleck, the former Operating Room Program Team Manager at St. Boniface Hospital. She mentioned how hard her staff were working and wondered if the public would be interested in hearing directly from Hospital staff," explains Osler.

"I reached out to Hospital administration, and they were fully supportive. And so, the 'Real Stories from Real Health-Care Workers' social media campaign was created to reinforce public health messaging." Osler says health-care workers in a variety of roles responded to her call for participants in the stories. Many were eager to share their experiences so people could understand the strain the second wave was putting on the Hospital and health-care system.

A man who identified himself as a registered nurse explained how he contracted COVID on the job: "I got sick and it didn't matter how sick I got, my biggest worry was, 'Am I going to make my family sick?' For 14 days...my fear was, 'Did I make them sick? And will it be considered my fault?' Because I felt like it would be."

"I was moved by the honesty and rawness of the comments and stories that they shared. Their compassion for their patients and the families always shone through," says Osler.

A woman who identified herself as a nurse in Intensive Care: "I'd like to share a message of how difficult it is in the ICU when we have to tell families that they are not going to be allowed to come in to say goodbye to their loved-ones. Families who may have five children have to choose two or three who are actually going to be allowed to come in, and it's devastating."

Thank you for following, supporting, and engaging with Dr. Gigi Osler (@dr.gigosler) and the Foundation (@stbhf) on Instagram.

You Fought Back

Community responded to health-care crisis with cash, gifts, food

Faced with the challenge of our lifetimes, you opened your heart and helped supply thermometers, cots, a portable ultrasound, and more. Meanwhile, local restaurants and businesses delivered hot meals and comfort items almost daily for health-care workers on the front lines.

Your support of St. Boniface Hospital Foundation's COVID-19 Response Fund in 2020 allowed St. Boniface to address urgent equipment needs, kept patients connected with their families, and lifted the spirits of health-care workers on the front lines with:

- ✓ Gift cards and other items to show appreciation for Hospital staff focused on COVID-19 efforts
- ✓ Equipment to keep the Hospital well-prepared – including a handheld ultrasound device used in the assessment of critically ill patients, cots, and thermometers
- ✓ Publication of Sciences Mag Junior, a children's magazine that helped explain the science behind the virus and COVID-19
- ✓ Additional phone lines to allow patients to keep in touch with their loved-ones, and upgraded television services in their hospital rooms
- ✓ St. Boniface Hospital research projects – among them, a study into the lungs' lipids that holds promise for COVID-19 treatment.

Together we raised more than $656,000 for St. Boniface Hospital's critical response effort. Thank you for being a lifeline for St. Boniface.

Legacy of Hope Society

Leaving an estate gift to St. Boniface Hospital is the beginning of a healthier future. It signifies your desire to support those who need care, and those who provide it. Thank you to our Legacy of Hope Society members, listed as of December 31, 2020.

Renovations, Renewal, and Recovery

Improvements made to McEwen Building, where mental health services are offered

Each year thousands of Manitobans find care for mental illness at St. Boniface Hospital's McEwen Building, where treatment begins with the belief that recovery is possible.

"We start from the place that patients are more than their disease or their diagnosis," said Daryl Croft, Program Team Manager, St. Boniface Hospital Mental Health Program. "Giving care is much more than just giving medications. Recovery requires an environment that's safe, soothing, and provides some sense of community."

With generous donors contributing $1.5 million toward the project, the McEwen Building underwent extensive renovations to provide an optimal environment for healing. The renovations, completed in April 2021, include anti-ligature and security upgrades that reduce potential safety risks for patients and staff alike, while updates to the physical space create a calmer and more home-like setting for inpatients.

"There are so many improvements, from the flow of natural light to the addition of more bathrooms and spaces to socialize," Croft said. "For someone now to be able to sit and look out the window at the Red River, it can be a moment of peace."

Originally a residence for medical students, the McEwen Building was named for Dr. Sanger McEwen, who served as St. Boniface Hospital's Medical Director from 1939 to 1951. After a conversion to house the Hospital's Mental Health Program in the 1980s, the building did not undergo significant updates prior to renovations that began in 2020.

Today the McEwen Building is a hub for mental health services ranging from psychiatric care to occupational therapy for adult patients living with mental illnesses. Over 400 inpatients are admitted every year, and care teams also handle more than 14,000 outpatient visits annually.

Croft wants donors to know their gifts toward the renovations are an investment in mental health and well-being.

"The doctors, nurses, therapists, social workers, aides, housekeeping, security – all of us on site – we care passionately for our patients. Donors have helped create a comforting and welcoming environment where patients can do their best to become well, and we can perform at our best to help them on that journey."

Thank you for supporting mental health care in our community. You've made the McEwen Building a home away from home for patients in the Mental Health Program.

Improvements in the McEwen Building include:

- Updated inpatient bedrooms with space for personal items
- Redesigned family and recreation areas maximizing natural light and optimize space
- Enhanced existing and new additional washrooms to facilitate self-care
- Upgraded kitchen and dining rooms

Gene Research Aims to Save Hearts, Halt Cancer

Sean Barnes has experienced some rough times in recent years.

In late 2018, Barnes was diagnosed with colon cancer and received emergency surgery. He underwent 12 rounds of chemotherapy in the following months, successfully beating his cancer. However, the health concerns were not over for this otherwise well husband, father, coach, and construction executive.

A standard follow-up appointment in May 2020 identified concerns with Barnes's heart. This led to further investigation at St. Boniface Hospital and the discovery that his left anterior descending artery (LAD) was 70 per cent blocked. A fully blocked LAD creates the notorious widow-maker heart attack.

An appointment was scheduled at the Hospital's Bergen Cardiac Care Clinic, where Barnes had a 32-millimetre stent inserted into his LAD. He went home the same day.

"I'm a pretty active guy and I wasn't experiencing chest pain or any other symptoms, so it was a big surprise to me," Barnes said. "I'm grateful and happy it was caught."

"I've got nothing but good things to say about my care at St. Boniface Hospital and CancerCare Manitoba."

Still, Barnes wonders whether his cancer treatment caused or contributed to his heart trouble.

Connecting the Dox

At St. Boniface Hospital's Albrechtsen Research Centre, Dr. Lorrie Kirshenbaum, Director of the Institute of Cardiovascular Sciences, has made breakthroughs with promise to improve the lives of cancer patients receiving chemotherapy. His research in this area has been made possible by the generous support of St. Boniface Hospital Foundation donors.

While medical advances have led to the development of agents that can effectively kill cancer cells, some of these drugs, such as Doxorubicin (DOX), can also damage the heart. DOX is a common chemotherapy drug used to treat many cancers.

"When patients undergo chemotherapy, drugs like DOX act like sledgehammers – they attack all cells that divide, whether cancerous or healthy," said Kirshenbaum. "Because heart cells stop dividing at birth, these cells can't repair themselves when they become damaged, and the pumping activity of the heart can become impaired."

As a result, cancer patients undergoing such treatments are susceptible to acute and chronic cardiac side-effects, including arrhythmias, ventricular dysfunction, and heart failure.

Kirshenbaum has discovered the source of this side effect. "What happens is that DOX turns on a suicide gene called Bnip3, and when Bnip3 is turned on, it's a killer." This is the same gene that programs heart cells to die when a person suffers a heart attack.

He's working to solve this problem by developing an 'inhibitor' drug to keep the Bnip3 gene dormant in the heart, without compromising the drug's ability to kill the cancer cells.

Your support made it possible: St. Boniface Hospital was named the #1 research-intensive hospital of our size in Western Canada for the ninth year in a row.

FONDATION • FOUNDATION

You inspired us.

Confronting COVID-19

Together we raised more than $656,000 for St. Boniface Hospital's critical response effort.

Front line health-care workers and COVID-19 patients at St. Boniface Hospital needed support, and you stepped forward to help supply thermometers, cots, a portable ultrasound, staff appreciation items, phone line and TV access for patients, and more. Thank you.
